WOMEN IN STEAM WORKSHOP

WITH GOLARA HAGHTALAB

AN IMMERSIVE EXPERIENCE OF FABRICATION, DESIGN AND SOUND

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 3
12 to 1 p.m. | Main Building Auditorium (M229)

Golara Haghtalab is an Iranian-American artist, chemist and innovation oriented designer. Haghtalab is currently an Artist-in-Residence in the Make to Learn Laboratory at the University of Virginia, teaching maker education workshops in the Curry School of Education. Previously, she worked for a chemical instrumentation company as a Product Designer and an Associate Chemist, helping manufacture and market proprietary devices. Haghtalab is a PVCC alumna and has a B.A. from UVA in both Chemistry and Studio Arts.

Hosted by the Manufacturing and Electronics Technology Program. For more information contact Katie Thach at kthach@pvcc.edu.

This event is supported by the National Science Foundation Grant No. 1601168. Disclaimer: “Any opinions, findings, and conclusions or recommendations expressed during this event/in event material do not necessarily reflect the view of the National Science Foundation”